some days recently, in looking after the erection of the monument now in progress.

—There will be no Wednesday evening prayer meeting in St. James' Church during the month of August.

Prof. Harry Much Alive.

In the picture of the "Globe Inn" in last week's issue of the Compiler, which interested many of our readers, was a group of persons, all of whom with a single exception were believed to have gone over the Divide. Last week the discovery was made that a second one was very much alive, namely Prof. J. B. Harry the old music teacher.

Prof. J. B. Harry taught "singing schools" in Gettysburg, Hanover, Carlisle and many towns throughout this section. He was a most capable and thorough instructor and many persons owed to him at least the foundation of their proficiency in vocal music. His last public appearance was about thirty years ago, when he gave an exhibition to demonstrate through the skill of his children in music reading and vocalization the value of a chart he had originated, for use in teaching music in the public schools. His own children were wonderfully proficient, being able to read off-hand musical notation of any grade, backward as well as forward, more fluently and correctly than most children of the same age could read their native language.

Almost every one who thought of Prof. Harry at all thought of him as dead; but he is still living and very much alive. He is 82 years of age and resides with his daughter, Miss Emma V. Harry, at New Castle, Pa.

Prof. Harry was living in dignified quiet and repose when he received a letter from a niece, Mrs. Addie Camp, of Pittsburg, calling his attention to the claim of a family named Schumann to a tract of about 300 acres of land in the heart of the city of Baltimore, leased for 100 years to various parties. The lease, it is said, expires this fall, and the Schumann heirs are to attempt to regain possession of the land, which is now valued at $400,000. When Prof. Harry heard this story, in spite of his 82 years, he determined to give up ease and follow a quest for gold, to set out to prove his title to the Schumann estate as a grandson of Barbara Schumann, of Winchester, Va. The pilgrimage on which he is about to start will lead him to visit many graveyards in Pennsylvania, Maryland and Virginia, and to search records in many counties for data to prove his claims to the many millions that seem so near to him and his relatives.

Baseball Games.

The games last week in the Sunday School League ended as follows:

Tuesday evening St. James defeated College by score of 5 to 0.

Thursday evening the Reformed team took the game from the Presbyterians by score of 8 to 2.

Friday evening the game between Catholics and Methodist ended in a dispute which has been appealed to the Board of Managers and it will be for the Board to order game played over or give the game to the Catholic team, the Methodist team having withdrawn.

On Monday evening the Catholic team won game over the United Brethren by score of 6 to 1.

The games this week will be

Tues. Aug. 2—St. James vs Reformed.

Wed. Aug. 3—Methodist vs Presbyterian.

Fri. Aug. 5—Catholic vs College.

Mon. Aug. 8—U. B. vs Presbyterian.

Union S. S. Picnic.

The Union Picnic of the Protestant Sunday Schools of Gettysburg will be held on Thursday, August 4th in the grove of Franklin Frommeyer, one mile north east of town.

Members of the different churches and their friends are cordially invited to attend.

Carriages will be at the churches from 8.30 to 9.30 where tickets can be had. After that carriages can be secured during the day around Centre Square.

The fare for the round trip will be 15 cents. Tickets will be on sale at the stores of G. W. Spangler and Mark K. Eckert.

The Committee.

MARRIAGES.

RITTINGER-FISSEL—On last Saturday, July 30, at Harrisburg, Miss Rosie M. Fissel, daughter of Sheriff and Mrs. Fissel of this place, and Edgar Rittinger of Harrisburg, were united in marriage by Rev. M. Young. The bride and groom spent Sunday with bride's parents and on Monday left on a wedding trip to Philadelphia, New York, Niagara and other places. They will reside in Harrisburg where the groom is engaged in the meat business.

TOOMEY-YINGLING—Jacob B. Toomey, of Hanover and Miss Mary A. Yingling, daughter of John Yingling, of Irishtown, Adams County, were married in the rectory of St. Joseph's Catholic Church, Sunday, July 24, at 9 p. m. by Rev. Father Huber. Both the bride and groom are cigar-makers. After the marriage the young couple started housekeeping in a house in Hanover.

Salem B. Church will hold a festival at the church near Granite Hill, Saturday evening, August 6.

AN IDEAL MILITARY CAMP AND MANEUVER AREA IS OPINION OF GEN. WOTHERSPOON.

The Gettysburg Camp Surpasses from Many Points of View Other Similar Camps.

The big instruction and maneuver United States camp on the hill east of town is a thing of the past. On Sunday morning the city of tents had disappeared. The tents had been coming down during the week as the militia took train. Sunday morning the District of Columbia militia and the U. S. regulars broke camp. Many of their tents had been taken down and packed up on Saturday, the soldiers on Saturday night sleeping in "dogies" and these were hastily rolled up Sunday morning after the last reveille had been sounded and the last mess eaten, and the waiting trains were filled and before noon train load after train load went up or down the Western Maryland. Among the last to leave were Batteries E and F, Third United States Artillery, A. Co. of United States Engineers and the War College detachment. All of these marched back to Fort Meyer and took up their journey about noon and passed through town.

The camp was a great success in the opinion of both officers and privates. Indeed there was great enthusiasm throughout the tented city over the camp site and maneuver area and there is no question about the fact that again Gettysburg has made good.

Gen. W. W. Wotherspoon in an interview with a representative of the Compiler spoke in enthusiastic terms of Gettysburg as a camp and for maneuver purposes, declaring that it was "ideal." The hill had proven ideal in many ways, while during the day it was exposed to the hot sun yet the statement has been made to us by a number of those encamped there that every night there was a breeze across the hill which more than evened up for the heat of the day.

Gen. Wotherspoon was specially delighted with the maneuver area, declaring it again and again to be ideal, that it offered an almost endless variety, that no two maneuvers were alike. That the country, made up of hills and ravines, open country, streams, timber, brush land, rocky land, made an area affording every variety of maneuver and that it was ideal.

To the question as to how our people treated them, the answer was, "They treated us fine, we have practically no complaints to make." Then he went on to say that in some instances claims of damages had been made before parties had been made whether any damage had been done. He illustrated by saying, A party came to camp saying that a number of his apple trees had been stripped of every apple on the trees and at once a party were sent with the man to ascertain the extent of the damage but trees were found loaded with fruit and the apples taken were beneficial to those that remained by reason of the abundance of the fruit. The party explained that he had not seen the trees before going to camp but remarks had been brought to him because a number of soldiers had been seen in his orchard. After seeing exactly how things were there was no trouble to adjust the matter with the owner.

Gen. Wotherspoon spoke of a few other cases where damages were claimed to corn fields but on investigation the farmer found they were not as large as at first supposed and that the result had been satisfactorily settled.

Gen. Wotherspoon declared that he had proven that a camp and maneuver could be successfully held in a farming community. That these maneuvers had been usually held where there was plenty of waste and cheap land and this had been the first camp held in a thickly settled farming community. He declared that his officers and men had been more careful not to do damage than would have been the case in a country of different character. That they had not gone into cultivated fields unnecessarily. That they had not cut every wire fence but in many cases had pulled out the staples and laid the wires down and afterwards fixed the same. That this had been done to make the proof that the damages done would not be prohibitive to the holding of a camp in a farming community.

To the inquiry as to the amount of damages paid, Gen. Wotherspoon replied that about a thousand dollars had been so far expended in damages and what the last few days of the camp would amount to he could give no idea. From later information the total damages ran between $1500 and $2000. Gen. Wotherspoon was very well satisfied with this showing and said it was much less than had been expected.

He believed the farmers had enjoyed the presence of the soldiers. He spoke of one farmer who had been watching a rather thrilling maneuver and the cavalry started on a charge toward his corn field, and his little daughter came running to him exclaiming, "Pop, Pop, the soldiers are in the corn," and the father enjoying the charge answered, "I don't give a damn."

Gen. Wotherspoon said that a number of damages that might seem peculiar to many had been made but that the farmers were entirely right in making them. He said these damages were made for water. That the drinking water in camp was often warm and when the soldiers struck a well of good cold water that they not only helped themselves but filled their canteens and frequently pumped the well dry. The General said in one instance he had sent word to a farmer that they should fill up their buckets with water, for the soldiers would be on the farm in the afternoon and the farmer's wife replied that their well hadn't been dry for twenty-two years and she guessed the soldiers couldn't drink it dry. The soldiers pumped every drop out of the well, drinking it and filling their canteens. The General declared it wouldn't be right not to pay these farmers, not for the water, but for the inconvenience of carrying water from some other point until the well could be used again.

At the time of our interview with Gen. Wotherspoon he had nothing to complain of as far as our people went nor had he heard of any complaints on their part which had not been satisfactorily adjusted. At the end of the camp he found one claim which was objectionable to him but it is likely this claim will be amicably settled.

Gen. Wotherspoon was asked whether Gettysburg could entertain any hopes as to future encampments and as to a permanent encampment. He replied that until a permanent encampment was located in this division he saw no reason why Gettysburg should not be selected again for a camp ground, that the situation and maneuver area had been so ideal that from the point of view of the army there could be no objections to coming to Gettysburg but on the contrary everything was in our favor. Whether our people would want them again and allow the use of their land as they had done was another question. As to a permanent camp site he feared the price of farm land might make that impossible.

Wherever the Government has bought a permanent camp site it has been at a point where a quantity of cheap land could be had for maneuver purposes along with better land, cheap land that could be bought for several dollars an acre. Gettysburg would not offer such a possibility. When the attention of the General was called to the prevailing market price of land east of Gettysburg he seemed surprised and supposed prices were much higher but did not commit himself as to whether a permanent site was impossible at the prevailing market price of land.

The Work of Last Week.

The work of last week was marked by an accident which upon first reports was thought to be serious to a number of soldiers but fortunately took no such turn. At the end of a sham battle on Tuesday afternoon when the artillery were returning from the field, a battery ran into a hornet's nest. The result was that several animals were stung and in their fright all the horses in the battery stampeded. Five privates were thrown from their horses or gun carriages and received bruises.

The fight on Tuesday was an effort of the two armies to outflank each other and the Red forces of the District of Columbia militia were awarded the decision over the Blues composed of the Regulars.

On Wednesday preparations were made for the big night maneuvers on Thursday and Friday when night battles were fought with the help of search lights. On Thursday night the Reds were defending the long slope of a hill with the aid of search lights but the lights proved of little assistance in locating the Blue army and the latter succeeded in reaching a point within two hundred yards of the enemy's entrenchments when the recall was sounded so there was no actual contact. The searchlights gave a spectacular effect to the maneuver, the long streams of light playing over the country and being swept across the sky from time to time, and when they occasionally fell upon the advancing line volley after volley of musketry would resound through the woods and hills and umpires would dash across the fields and declare so many men killed and thus barred from further participation.

On Friday evening the night battle was reversed from the one of previous night, the attacking army having the searchlights and while they proved effective in showing the attacking force the general character of the land over which the final charge was to be made, yet they were of little account in locating the position or force of the enemy.

The last maneuver was a sham battle between the Blue army composed of militia and the Red army composed of the Regulars and was another victory for the militia. The objective point for the Reds was the camp and for the Blue Bonneauville, and the camp of instruction narrowly escaped capture when the Red army advanced upon it. Only the energetic onslaught of the Blues which turned the left flank of the Reds, saved the big camp and allowed the Blue force to march straight through toward Bonneauville.

Healthy Camp.

The camp has been ideal as far as health has been concerned. In our interview of Gen. Wotherspoon he stated that sickness in camp had been twenty-sixth ten thousands of one percent, accidents were not included in this percentage and the sickness in camp had been confined to one case of measles, a few cases of poisoning and some sickness from eating green apples. At the end of camp all the patients were discharged except thirteen and they were sent to the Walter Reid Hospital at Washington and all were getting along nicely.

The forage poisoning among the horses was not on account of any local conditions but due to inexperience in feeding green hay. The hay not being dry when baled heated and produced a fungus growth and when eaten by the horses produced a poisoning like mushroom poisoning. The statement was made that where the bale was opened in the morning and scattered around and not fed until in the evening, there was no trouble, but where the bale was not open and immediately fed the trouble appeared and when this was understood the trouble was soon over. The total loss was fourteen horses and three mules.

The camp has been most successful in the amount of money left in Gettysburg and how far reaching this has been and will be is hard to tell. While it is believed that Gettysburg will prove to be one of the cheapest, if not the cheapest camp of the kind held by the Government, yet thousands of dollars were spent here, yes hundreds of thousands.

Over $160,000 was disbursed to regular and militia troops during the camp. Of this $140,000 was paid by the United States, the Pennsylvania troops being the only body not paid by the paymaster at headquarters. The safe of money in a canvas tent seemed as safe a place as the vault of a bank for thirty days the safe stood in the paymaster's tent, with an officer inside with loaded arms in front of him and on the outside were sentries with arms loaded with ball cartridges. Throughout the maneuvers all ball cartridges were taken from the troops and all the fighting had been with blank cartridges but the sentries around the paymaster's tent and his safe were prepared to defend at all times Uncle Sam's money if they had to kill to do it.

The one thing about the camp that seemed to annoy was the dust. There were times when storms of dust would be blown into camp and the York pike except immediately after a rain was a channel of dust, so thick at times that it seemed it might be cut out in chunks, but this condition did not do any harm or cause any sickness. It was a condition however that ought to be overcome during any future similar encampment.

OLD CONEWAGO MILL SOLD.

Scene of a Famous Inter-State Feud in Earlier Days.

Levi M. Miller has sold his grist mill in Conewago township, Adams county, originally known as the Kitzmiller mill, three miles south of Hanover, to J. D. Sheppard and C. N. Myers of that place, for $3,950. The property includes the mill, dwelling house and 20 acres of land, and is located along Little Conewago Creek. Possession will be given on the first of next September.

One of the most exciting events in the early history of that section occurred at this mill in 1752, when Dudley Digges, son of John Digges, proprietor of Digges' Choice, was killed by Jacob Kitzmiller, son of Martin Kitzmiller, owner of the mill. John Lemmon took up the tract in 1732, and made some improvements. These he sold to Martin Kitzmiller in 1737, telling him he would have to secure a title to the land from John Digges. As it was not within the limits of Digges' tract, Kitzmiller said he would get his title from the Penns. Kitzmiller built a dwelling and mill in 1739. Feb. 26, 1752, an alleged Maryland sheriff or deputy, with a party of men, including several of Digges' sons, came to the mill and attempted to arrest Martin Kitzmiller on a suit of John Digges, brought in Maryland. Kitzmiller called his sons to help him and a small riot ensued, in which Dudley Digges was shot in the stomach by a gun in the hands of Jacob Kitzmiller, who at the time was struggling with several of the raiders. The sheriff's party then departed, leaving young Digges lying on a pile of straw where he died several hours later.

Jacob Kitzmiller went to York and surrendered himself to the authorities and was duly tried and acquitted.

The Maryland authorities claimed the Kitzmiller tract was in Maryland, but the Pennsylvania court decided the tract to be vacant land, north of the Temporary line, and therefore by the Royal Order in Pennsylvania jurisdiction.

The log mill built in 1739 was enlarged in 1755 by a brick addition. Portions of this brick structure are still standing.

New Pipe Line in Operation.

Oil is now flowing through the pipe line of the Pure Oil Co.'s line running through the southern part of the county. The pumping station at Nunery, Franklin county, was recently completed and it started the work of pumping the oil over South Mountain last week. The oil after getting over these mountains finds its way to tide-water at Marcus Hook by gravity. The pipe line is 292 miles in length and entering Pennsylvania at the southwest corner runs the entire length of the State. Before the flow of oil was started through the pipe line a test had been made with water and a few imperfect places had been fixed. The line enters the county west of Fairfield and follows a line across county about four miles south of Gettysburg.

Gettysburg Hero Dies.

Chester S. Furman one of the nation's Medal of Honor men, died last week in Bloomsburg, Pa., at the age of 58 years. He was awarded the medal for leading a handful of men across an open stretch near Devil's Den, in the battle of Gettysburg, and capturing a detail of Louisiana Tiger sharpshooters who from a small building had been working havoc with the Union lines. In the same battle when the Union forces were retreating, it was Mr. Furman who grasped the colors and rallied the men, turned a rout into a victory at that point. He was prominent in his home town affairs.

PRESIDENT WM. GRANVILLE

WILL BE INAUGURATED ON THURSDAY, OCTOBER 20.

Plans Being Made to Make Day a Big One for Gettysburg College.

The committee to make arrangements for the inauguration of Dr. William A. Granville as President of Pennsylvania College have been busy preparing plans. The committee composed of Rev. Dr. C. M. Stock, chairman, of Hanover; Prof. Charles H. Huber, secretary, of Gettysburg; Dr. M. H. Valentine, of Gettysburg; John F. Dapp of Harrisburg, Harry L. Stahler of Norristown, and Charles S. Duncan of Gettysburg, met recently and decided that the inauguration should take place on Thursday, October 20. Notable educators have been invited and President Hadley of Yale University has accepted an invitation to make one of the addresses. Presidents of colleges and educational institutions throughout this section will be invited and it is expected to have a large number present. It is the purpose to have excursions run to Gettysburg from a number of nearby points and nothing is going to be left undone to get a good start to the greater Gettysburg everyone hopes is coming.

Among the plans of the committee is that the exercises will be held in a huge tent on the campus, that a male chorus of 200 or 300 voices from college, seminary and town will be trained and that a collation will follow inauguration with reception in the evening.

Dr. W. F. Eyster of the class of 1839, and William Gerhart of the class of 1841, have been invited to be present as the two oldest living graduates and it is understood that they will be here if their health permits.

Proposed New School Code.

The July issue of the Pennsylvania School Journal is a most interesting and valuable number. It is probably the most important issue of this periodical—now in its fifty-ninth volume—that has ever been sent out to its subscribers containing as it does, the full text of the proposed new school code of Pennsylvania, for which the school authorities of the State desire the widest publicity and the most far-reaching discussion. This code was prepared by a very competent educational commission, appointed by Governor Stuart under a resolution passed by the Legislature of 1907. It has been carefully revised upon the basis of the discussion and suggestions made during the legislative session of 1909, and is believed to be an embodiment of the legislation needed by the school system of Pennsylvania at this time. It should be read and studied with care by every intelligent friend of general education in the State. Persons desiring it or extra copies of it can obtain them by addressing "The Pennsylvania School Journal, Lancaster, Pa." Single copies, postpaid, 15 cts.; seven copies $1; twelve copies, $1.50. One hundred copies, by express, $7.50.

Number of Accidents.

Walter Ziegler was driving down York street on Monday evening and buggy being near the pavement on north side started to slip at the old covered water course on second square and striking the big stone covering gutter at that point, two wheels were torn off. Mr. Ziegler escaped without injury.

John J. Black and sister Miss Sue Black of Straban township were driving one day last week when horse taking fright ran away and upset buggy. Miss Black escaped uninjured. Mr. Black receiving a number of severe bruises.

Hadley Heindel, young son of Mr. and Mrs. Norman Heindel of Carlisle street, was hurt on Monday morning by a blank cartridge. The shell was of the kind used by the soldiers in the sham battles and was thought to be harmless and the boy held a match to the shell when it exploded and a portion of the shell lodged in both of his legs.

William H. Sharetts of Stevens Street was at work in the Reeser Furniture Factory last Wednesday when a board fell on him severely injuring him about the head, shoulder and right arm.

Joseph Heuencau of Harrisburg employed in the bakery of M. S. Yohe on Chambersburg St. while at work on Monday was caught by a belt of the machinery and thrown in such a way as to break a bone in the arm between elbow and shoulder.

Gettysburg Borough Sued.

Henry Little, through his attorney, Chas. E. Stahle, Esq., brought suit last week against the Borough of Gettysburg to recover $1000 damages for injuries alleged to have been sustained when he was thrown by a defective crossing plate on Chambersburg street on April 26, 1910. The plaintiff alleges that by reason of being violently thrown to the ground, by the said unsafe crossing plate, he was severely injured and bruised on the right leg, suffered great pain and nervous shock and has since been impaired in health and strength by reason thereof.

GEN. LEE'S HEADQUARTERS

MORE YET AS TO THE LOCATION OF THE SAME.

Gettysburg Girl Going to Oak Ridge Seminary Remembers the Site in Apple Orchard.

I have been noticing with interest, since March 20th, April 30th, and July 20th, the articles in the COMPILER relating to the Headquarters of General Lee at Gettysburg, and had intended replying earlier had not illness prevented. And for many reasons it gives me a sense of satisfaction, and I feel vindicated, if I may use the expression, when I see contradicted in our town paper, the occupancy of the "House along the Chambersburg Pike," by General Lee as his Headquarters. And have been protesting against such statement, ever since it has been made, and ever since I first saw a picture, or photograph, representing that house, as General Lee's Headquarters. I told Mr. Tipton, the Battlefield Photographer, long ago, that he was wrong, that General Lee, never had his headquarters there. But of course, he was not to blame, as he, like many others, had accepted such statement, made by misinformed historians, until it was believed by the general public. But there was one, in the town of Gettysburg, who never accepted it, one who is now impelled to write these lines, as stated above, for many reasons.

As briefly as possible, without referring to any Battlefield historian, memory takes a "backward sweep," and would lovingly linger around a spot, which should have long ago, been specially noticed. On this great Battlefield of Gettysburg, some will say, there are many spots, which should be specially noticed. So these are, and if each one, would write his or her knowledge of facts, there would be more truth in some of the statements, which are now made.

On the Chambersburg Pike on that part now designated, as "Burford Avenue," on the right hand side, as you proceed from Gettysburg, to the top of the hill, including the house, opposite to that house "said to have been occupied by General Lee, during the battle, July 1-3, 1863," the natural, and artificial objects have considerably changed, since the Battle of Gettysburg. And the school children, of 47 years ago, have become sadder, and wiser, as they crossed the threshold of the great theatre of life, in which they have become living actors, and have learned, that there are more things in Heaven and Earth, than were dreamed of," then, when that modest building, known as "Oakridge Seminary," of which Miss Carrie Sheeds was Principal, and to whom a beautiful tribute is paid, in the book, titled "Women of the War," that modest hall of learning, which then accepted, only the best, boarding and day pupils. It included a number from our own State, and also from the State of Maryland, and particularly a number of young ladies from Baltimore, whose natural grace of manner, and accomplishments, charmed all who came in contact with them. I seem to digress, but it is necessary for me to linger for a little while, at this writing, at Oakridge Seminary.

In an article in the COMPILER, of June 26th, 1907 you will see, what a Day pupil of Oakridge Seminary says, about the time, "When the Rebels came," Soiree, &c. Said pupil was there, young as she was, trying to peer into the "store house of learning," long before the Battle of Gettysburg, and was there too, when the "Rebs" came down the Chambersburg Pike, perhaps selecting a place for their famous leader, General Lee. And I know, "that house along the Chambersburg Pike" was never selected as his Headquarters. General Lee's Headquarters were included in the space, between Oakridge Seminary, and the hill, including the house occupied by some one, named Marshall. There was an apple orchard in that space, but not an extensive one. And there may have been some other trees, also. And there was a lot of grass, as that apple orchard was not kept with the neatness apple orchards are now kept. There were tents pitched there during the Battle, and I heard those tents referred to, as the Headquarters of General Lee. Some of the young ladies, the Baltimore girls particularly, and I can name them, were in Oakridge Seminary, during the Battle, and assisted the wounded who were taken there, as you can learn. And afterwards, we talked about the terrible scenes of the Battle, and General Lee being so near them. He may have been also, in the house, at the top of the hill, as mention was made, in a commiserating way, as we "talked" of the aged lady living there before the Battle, and she must have been there during the Battle, as she was blind, or partially so. And if the links in the chain could be connected, perhaps the statement, or reply of the "old lady" Thompson, who lived in the now "said house" would be better understood, and the truth made plain. We quote from the COMPILER of April 20th, speaking of some visitors, to the "old stone house." "They questioned her about General Lee, and she told them how well she remembered and would never forget General Lee sitting on a chair, at a window she pointed to, reading his Bible." I do not question the veracity of the "old lady," and accepted her statement as given in the COMPILER of March 30th, in answer to the question "Did General Lee have his Headquarters in this house?" she replied, "No Sir." And from the window she pointed to, of the "old stone," "Said house" the "old lady" Thompson could have easily seen "General Lee sitting on a chair, at a window reading,"—a window in the house on the hill, which is included in the space, then reaching to Oakridge Seminary, the space in which those small tents were pitched. So it is apparent, that General Lee may also have been in the house on the hill, as his human and sympathetic heart, may have been touched by the infirmities, and surroundings of the aged occupant, (or occupants) and were consoled, by his "reading his Bible." The talks we had were in 1893, and perhaps the first months of 1864, both here, and in Baltimore. And from the time I first saw a photograph of that house, now designated by battlefield guides as General Lee's Headquarters, or that location pointed out. I have never ceased to contradict the statement. And many times my cheeks have flushed, at such assertions particularly when I was contradicted, because my friends had been misinformed by guides and historians. I was neither guide nor historian, but had very good reasons for knowing the truth. And I thought, history should be truthful.

Once particularly, years ago, friends from Boston were visitors here who took special pride and interest in the battlefield. I was with them as they drove over the field, as was also uncle Emanuel Bushman, now dead. When I pointed out the real location of General Lee, during the battle, there was a very animated discussion by the occupants of the carriage. One man, a (Brevet) General, a fine military man, and cultured gentleman, and lawyer, another, also a lawyer, both graduates of Bowdoin College, Brunswick, Maine. I could never come over to the opposite side so the question was left disputed. I know they thought I ought to know. And so I did. I never heard that lawyer Stephen Harmon, of Boston, was dead, and I wish that he could see the COMPILER of recent dates, concerning the subject matter of this letter, and he would understand why my cheeks flushed as I persisted in my statement of the fact. He was collecting facts, and afterwards lectured in Maine and Boston, concerning Gettysburg, &c. So you see that I have always contradicted the present location of General Lee's Headquarters, and my assertion is not of "mushroom growth." My eyes never could look upon that house as now designated, without some inward comment, which I know, manifested itself by a little marked expression, "firmness of expression of the lips," I suppose, mellowed, of course, by a soft lustre of the eye, acquired during these years of contradiction and misrepresentation of a historical statement and photographed untruth.

When we "talked," we were so young, that measured now, by the span of 47 years, any degree of dignity which might be conveyed by the word conversed, could not be applied to us school girls. We talked and laughed and even cried over our battle experience. Lenses or field glasses were not needed to convey or impress upon the mind, or mental vision, the nearness of the great military leader, General Lee, and his Headquarters and tents pitched in the space adjoining Oak Ridge Seminary were talked of, and the description of the size of the tents excited in me a sense of wonder. At that time I thought that great Generals or distinguished military leaders occupied tents about the size of the largest "circus tent" we can see spread at intervals in our rural towns, inviting the lads and lasses and older grown to come in and see the "show." Some of the Oak Ridge Seminary girls are dead, some half dead, and some alive or half alive, yet possessing mental activity and interest in all things about which they have read or "heard tell of." I mention all this as one good proof of knowing that historians have been misinformed, and why I know that General Lee's Headquarters were in the space between Oak Ridge Seminary and the included house on the hill, instead of the now "said house" on the opposite side of the Chambersburg Pike.

So, when in the COMPILER of July 20, 1910, "More as to Lee's Headquarters," came to my notice, I said, now that starts my blood circulating without the aid of medicine. And it was a good stimulant without expense, as I had the ready material. And when, in the COMPILER of March 30th, and readings up to July 20th, the artistic skill of the battlefield photographer was again presented in the shape of that "house along the Chambersburg Pike," I said, give me my pen, why should I shrink any longer from misinformed historians and guides. When we walked daily, long before the battle, and tumbled "somersault" with others, scattering our books on that portion of the Chambersburg Pike leading from Oak Ridge Seminary to town: when the "Rebs" made their raid and we raced home the shortest route: when we climbed trees, and carried and handed this of water to the famished soldiers, and sung with other school girls and old and young, married and unmarried patriots, both white and black, to the passing marching soldiers, why should not the truth be made known through the medium of the pen and the proof of the statement given?

An humble but pretty lively young school girl then, in 1863, seeing also a ludicrous side of the "moving pictures" in the great battle, we have learned after the lapse of years, which generally includes a journey through the realms of the real and the ideal, which develops the mind and makes the truth apparent. We have learned that great and distinguished Generals do not have their headquarters in a tent the size of an immense "circus tent." And that is lots to know and a world of meaning is included in it. I have said enough for this time, so my pen must not run away with my thoughts, and I want to live a while longer to know that historians and guides may tell the correct and true place of General Lee's Headquarters, which were in the space between Oak Ridge Seminary and the hill, including the house thereon, instead of the "said house" then occupied by the "old lady" Thompson.

Set in my boat a fishin'
While the world goes rollin' on Mighty hard to keep from wishin'
For the day to quickly dawn.
When I kin say—Ol' world—go to—
For I've had all I want o' you;
I'm goin' a fishin'.

Tired o' watchin' men o' scrappin'
'Till their hearts grow hard and cold
Tryin' to ketch their neighbors nappin';
Heapin' up their bonds an' gold;
I want to say—Ol' world—go to—
I'm gettin' mighty sick of you;
I'm goin' a fishin'.

Tryin' hard to make a showin'
Tollin' early, tollin' late;
Always feelin' almost knowin'

May Prevent Tuberculosis.

The State Board of Health in Pennsylvania has just completed experiments in preventing tuberculosis which, it is claimed, will in time stamp out the disease, which is carrying off 2,000,000 persons annually. The announcement of this discovery was made by Dr. S. G. Dixon, of Philadelphia, state commissioner of health, at the banquet in McKeesport. Dr. Dixon was slated for an address, but before beginning he said he had a little surprise for the physicians gathered and it was that a sure preventive for tuberculosis had been found. The State Board of Health is now working hard on the principle that the same preventive may be used as a cure also for cases partly developed. This, however, has not yet been assured.

Dr. Dixon said he was not yet at liberty to give out the secrets of preparation which, he said, would be used to inoculate both sexes when quite young. Dr. Dixon said the authorities at Harrisburg had been working on the process for several years and that the first principle involved was the discovery of an obscure country doctor.

The State Commissioner will ask the State of Pennsylvania for a large appropriation to be used in the erection of an institution where the discovery can be applied.

Col. C. H. Demming.

The Harrisburg "Telegraph" last week said of Col. C. H. Demming, court stenographer of Adams county for many years:

He has lived more lives and mastered more professions than any two of the average men. Newspaperman, soldier, expert stenographer, mineralogist, geologist, and good roads advocate. Col. H. C. Demming is one of Harrisburg's best known and also one of its most traveled residents. The Colonel comes from Connecticut ancestry, one of his forebears having been a member of the colony to whom the King of England granted the charter for the founding of what became the nutmeg commonwealth. It would take a column or two to tell the Colonel's active and varied career. He worked on the "Telegraph" while a boy and spent his evenings studying law and then geology. He was in numerous battles and in time of peace has found opportunity for his talents in many ways, chiefly in mineral matters. Every now and then the Colonel takes a trip to the far west to look over some properties and the first thing you know he turns up from a long journey in Arizona as chipper and as fresh as though he had just walked over the Mulberry street viaduct of a morning.

OUT OF THE GLOOM.

Many a Gloomy Countenance in Gettysburg Now Lightens With Happiness.

A bad back makes you gloomy. Can't be happy with continual back ache. The aches and pains of a bad back Are mostly due to sick kidneys. Doan's Kidney Pills cure sick kidneys.

They have made many a happy home in Gettysburg.

Read what a grateful citizen says:

Mrs. T. C. Biddle, Water street, Gettysburg, Pa., says: "Two years ago I publicly recommended Doan's Kidney Pills and at this time I am glad to confirm my former statement. A member of my family was in bad shape with kidney complaint and was laid up for eight weeks. Backache was almost constant and there were severe pains through the loins. After several remedies had been tried to no avail, Doan's Kidney Pills were procured at the People's Drug Store and their use was begun. Relief soon followed and there was a marked improvement in every way. My advice to anyone afflicted with kidney complaint is to give Doan's Kidney Pills a trial."

Marian's Two Letters

By Edith Gray

(Copyright, 1908, by Associated Literary Press.)

Marian Westbrook sat in the great living room of the old Westbrook country home, her hands lying idly in her lap, her brow knit in strange abstraction of thought.

After all, she wondered, had she been justified in writing as she had to Forrest Newbury and young Robert Thornton? She recalled the wording of the two letters. Each line was strangely vivid, even though she had hurriedly scratched off the notes a few days before, fearful lest, in pausing for careful composition, she lose courage and fall altogether in taking this important step.

In Forrest's note she recalled the old days they had spent together in the little village where his father had officiated in the quaint, ivy-grown church of St. Vincent, and where his grandfather had preached before him. She spoke of the long summer days spent in gathering flowers and playing tennis on the Westbrook courts and of the autumn evening confidences before the very fireplace into which she was now gazing so intently. She ended the note briefly:

"You asked me many times during those days one question. You recall it? I never wished to marry. I was selfish, perhaps. I am still selfish. Last night, when Dr. Morley told me that the illness against which I have been fighting so desperately had at last reached its crisis and that the change was for the worse, I decided that I could no longer live in hopeless, bitter loneliness. If you still want me, I will marry you."

The second note was less intimate, but equally to the point. She had met Robert Thornton on a western trip the previous summer and it was with peculiar forebodings and many inward promptings that she had finally summoned courage to send him the simple little note.

"My Dear Mr. Thornton," it ran. "I remember that we were standing at the top of Mount Winslow and the Marian managed to smile upon the little maid, as she shook her head.

"No, Marie, I am quite comfortable." The letter was lying on the table now within reach, but she was afraid to glance toward it, knowing that the handwriting would at once betray its author.

"Very well," said Marie.

As the maid left the room, Marian clutched the letter with an odd little cry. It was from Forrest, dear old friend. She could always depend upon him! She tore open the seal.

She turned page after page in feverish haste. At the end she bowed her head in her hands and though harsh, choking sobs forced their way to her lips, her eyes remained dry.

The letter was kind enough, but self-centered and egotistical in tone. Forrest Newbury wrote that he remembered everything. He would always love her, but he cherished her rather as a vision, a dream to be satisfied in the hereafter, than as a woman made for the brutal cares of life. He was very poor and his parish was growing. He was bitterly sorry to hear of her ill health. He would run down to see her as soon as possible. There must, of necessity, be some delay, as his people required so much of his time and energy. In a word, as Marian confessed to herself, in spite of all his tactful rhetoric, he did not want her, a burdensome invalid upon his hands.

She sat before the fire for an hour, or a minute—she could not have told which—musing. It was the entrance of Marie that finally roused her.

"A gentleman, Miss Marian. Shall I show him in?"

Marian spoke listlessly. "If you please, Marie." She remembered that Dr. Morley had told her that as he was unusually busy, his assistant would make the customary call that evening.

She did not raise her head until the footsteps paused at her side. Then she cried aloud and her face grew strangely white as she raised her eyes to those of Robert Thornton.

"You, you," she gasped. "You—" There was a wondrous tenderness in his dark eyes as he answered her. "Did you not expect me?"

She sobbed, half dazed: "I do not know; I do not know. I would only be a burden. I—I—"

He knelt at her side. "Little white flower," he said, "I am glad that you are frail and weak, that you can no longer walk, for now you will see how great is my love—and my strength will be enough for two."

She pushed him aside, then, with a strange roughness. "It is a lie," she said. "Forgive me, but it was only to test you, to see what love means to a man. It is true that I have been very ill—that the crisis was reached a week ago, but it was for better, not for worse. Soon I shall be well."

Then, as he sprang toward her in the freighth, she sobbed against his shoulder. "And I love you."

THE AUGUST MAGAZINES.

CONGRESS SHOULD SUPPORT NATURAL RESOURCES.

Something of the Reformers Who Have Been Doing Things in the Political World.

What Conservation Really Means.

The Federal Government does what the Morgan-Guggenheim Syndicate say is impossible. Congress is trustee for the lands of the Indian tribes in Oklahoma. The Interior Department manages these lands. It leases the surface for grazing, the mineral and oil rights to operators. It collects rent for the land, and a royalty on the mineral products. And it holds these revenues in trust for the Osage, Cherokee, Creek, Choctaw, and Chickasaw Indians. The total value of these trust moneys so collected amounts now to many millions of dollars. The annual royalties collected amount to $696 a year for every man, woman, and child in the Osage tribe, or approximately $3,000 per family. Land and mining royalties amount to $150 per family in the Cherokee, Chickasaw, Choctaw, and Creek tribes. In ten years' time the royalties on coal and asphalt amounted to $2,000,000.

This is what is meant by conservation. It is not very difficult to understand. And it is not difficult to do. Scattered all over the Western states, still undeveloped, are mineral deposits of untold value. They include coal, phosphate, asphalt, possibly gold and copper lands. In the Rockies and the Sierra Nevada are mountain streams capable of being converted into light, heat, and power for the upbuilding of the country, for the lighting of cities and homes, for doing the work of hand and of steam. These streams need only to be harnessed. Switzerland, Bavaria, and Baden are harnessing their water power and distributing it for use by all the people at an insignificant cost. The government of the province of Ontario is distributing light and power from Niagara Falls from one section of the province to the other; while private corporation plants lodged along the United States bank of the greatest natural power source in the world are growing rich selling light, heat, and electric force to Buffalo and the adjoining territory.

In Alaska there are coal, copper, timber, and other natural resources upon which Wall Street is now casting lustful eyes. These resources have been estimated at billions upon billions of dollars. Nobody can more than guess what they are worth. Today they belong to you and to me. They can be developed for your use and mine, just as the mineral land of Oklahoma are developed for the Indian, if your Congressman at Washington does not barter them away for a mess of pottage under the plea of "development."

Wall Street will stifle conservation if it can. By so doing, it will stifle competition too. But, intelligently managed, the whole of western America can be freed from the monopoly of natural resources which oppresses the eastern states. Your Congressman can help do this. Will he? That depends on you. Again I ask—is it not your real business to be sure that he votes on this subject of conservation in your interest and not in that of Wall Street?—Frederic C. Howe in the August EVERYBODY'S.

wind was keen and sweet against our faces, when you asked me that question for the first and, perhaps (who knows?) the last time. You said then, 'If ever you are tired, if ever you are lonely, you have only to summon me. I will come.' I am no longer that active, free-limbed girl whom you used to compliment on mountain climbing. I am a hopeless, helpless invalid, but I am summoning you."

Marian Westbrook knew that both notes had reached their destination some 36 hours ago and that if they had been received and promptly answered she might expect the replies by the evening mail. What would be the result of her impetuous daring?

Of Forrest Newbury's answer she was reasonably certain. He was a frail young clergyman and had always, in spite of frequent advances on the part of many moonstruck damsels of his city parish, held aloof, cherishing, as he frequently wrote her, one glorious image in his heart. Marian Westbrook, of the old days, had been inclined to treat the serious young preacher as a joke. Since her father's death and the recent illness that had cut her off from active life and caused so many of her old friends to fall away from her, she turned back, with not a little tenderness, to the thought of renewed intimacy with the old lover and friend.

About Robert Thornton she was not so certain. His was of a more robust, care-free nature, unhampered by the visions and moods of the temperamental young parson. She wondered if he still remembered her and, if he did, whether that memory held anything of affection.

Well, it was a game well worth the playing. She had shown her hand and now it was left to the ever ruling Fates to decide the issue.

The great hall clock at the other end of the room ticked on monotonously. The girl shook back the soft lace from her wrist and searched the table beside her for some paper or book with which to distract her thoughts. She picked up a volume of poems, but threw it aside.

The clock struck slowly. Marian counted the eight strokes with breathless intensity. Then she heard the doorbell ring and tried to settle herself composedly as the white-capped maid entered the room.

"One letter, Miss Marian. Can I do anything for you?"

GREAT FUN FOR THE BOYS

Nothing Appealed to Them More Than Practice of Mashing Pins on the Railroad.

Away back there most of us remember the joyful if somewhat dangerous amusement we had in mashing pins on a railroad track. There was nothing like it.

To begin with, they didn't want us to do it, and there was an idea in our youthful heads that if ever a railroad man caught us putting things on the rails he'd skin us alive.

But there was something fascinating about it, and we all did it. Ordinary pins would do, but horseshoe nails were fine. Sometimes we would put a bit of metal across a pin and make a sword.

We'd creep out of the fence corners and carefully lay our pins along the track just before the Limited came along. A freight would mash pins, of course, but took too long in passing, and always jarred the pins every-which-a-way.

"Look out!" somebody would shout; "here she comes!" And away down the track, beyond the wide, sweeping curve, you could see the black smoke belching from the engine's smoke-stack. Then in a few moments you'd hear the rails singing, and in a few seconds more you would see the train swing into the straight-away track in the cut, headed for you like a streak.

Then you'd scramble down into the fence corners again and wait, gripping your teeth hard together. The train would bear down on you, faster and faster. The roar became like that of a great storm. The very earth was jarred; the rails rang madly, and with a gusty, heat-filled dash of metal and varnished cars the train sped past like a tornado, leaving behind it a sucking wind and an aftermath of sweeping dust, roaring on into the distance.

You'd catch your breath and rub the dust out of your eyes, and then go look for the mashed pins. Some of them you'd find, all right, but some would be hopelessly lost. Those on the track would be mashed as flat as any child would want—just as thin as paper.

Why, a train would flatten you like that if you lay down on the track.

Then somebody would see away down the rails a hand coming, with men in dirty blue pants pumping up and down, and there would be a scramble for safety.

If they ever caught you mashing pins on their tracks they'd sure skin you!—Galveston News.

William Kent—Reformer

A fine type of public-spirited citizen is William Kent of Chicago and San Francisco. Mr. Kent is a philanthropist who has always backed good men, good measures and good movements and vigorously fought their opponents. Something of Mr. Kent's character and the work he has outlined for himself is described in the August AMERICAN MAGAZINE. The following is quoted from the article:

"Upon his graduation from Yale, in 1887, he went to Chicago, where he lived for more than twenty years. He was from the beginning a leader in the struggle for municipal decency. He found Chicago in the clutches of a corrupt City Council, with a public too busy and too complacent to effectively object. He served as an Alderman for two years, during which time, with voice and pen in and out of the Council, like John the Baptist, he called the Council and the people to repentance. He was one of the founders and afterwards President of the Municipal Voters League of Chicago, the most successful institution ever organized in America for the purification of the municipal legislature through publicity and effective assistance to worthy candidates.

"Every worthy reformer enlists his sympathy, his co-operation and his pocketbook. Absolutely democratic himself, he trusts the people, and is afraid of no reform which increases the power of the people in their own government. Independent and fearless, and endowed with an unusual power of keen analysis with regard to governmental institutions and tendencies, he is admittedly one of the ablest reformers in that band of his contemporaries, who have been chiefly responsible for the moral movement throughout the country known as the 'uplift.' If he were not a reformer, he would be a writer. His literary contributions to many hard fought political campaigns have exposed the men and issued involved with such picturesqueness, keenness and forcefulness that the best man has won."

Didn't Recognize The Name?

A new conundrum is going the rounds in Washington:—"American tourists are importing into the United States in large quantities something which no custom house officer can discover and on which no duty can possibly be changed—what is it?"

The answer is, "English jokes on the American visitor."

Congressman Fassett, of New York, relates a story which a friend assures him is "absolutely true." Reaching London, the Congressman's acquaintance decided to visit Parliament and see the two houses in session. He was not aware that no stranger is allowed in the House of Lords while session is being held. Unaware that he was committing a gross breach of law and etiquette, the American tourist, who is described as a "nervy chap," tried to make his way in and showed much surprise on being stopped. There is a rule that the servants of the various lords may be admitted, provided they wish to speak to their masters, whether it be regarding a necktie set awry or a dinner engagement the Americans accept for once was not recognized; his persistence was remarkable, but his progress was stopped with the question:

"Sir, what lord do you serve?"

"What lord—do you take me for a minister exclaimed the astonished visitor.

"I merely ask what lord you serve that you may be admitted to the floor."

"Oh, I see. Well I serve the Lord Jehovah."

He passed in while the keeper of the door remarked to someone who stood near:

"He must mean one of those poor Scotch lairds—their names always sound queer—Joe Mitchell Chapple, in 'Affairs at Washington,' in the National Magazine for August.

Canadian Farmer's Annual Gamble.

For ten days and ten nights, early in August, the Canadian homesteader is uneasy, says Fred. Bates Johnson, in Success Magazine for August. The hot sun of a long summer day helps the feeble patches of yellow in the grain to make deep inroads into the mass of green. Day by day the conquering yellow sends its color over the receding green, until the field stands half and half. Night by night the homesteader watches the temperature, the winds, the clouds. Each night is a bit colder than the preceding one. There is the suggestion of frost in the air early one morning. The grain is now yellow with patches of green—the reverse of last week's condition. Under the influence of the blazing, burning sun, the yellow throws off the suggestion of frost and wades into the fast-disappearing ranks of green. Two or three days more and the green is gone, routed, vanquished. The yellow, now tipping into golden brown, dominates the field. Another day or so, and early one morning a binder sings in the field. The grain is ripe and ready. It has been saved, and none is there to care for the biting, stinging, killing frost that comes a few nights later. The homesteader has made a gamble. He has gambled with Nature—and won.

GETTYSBURG'S FUTURE.

The United States camp of instruction which came to an end on Sunday seems to point the way toward a future for Gettysburg. The Gettysburg National Park Commissioners have indicated in recent report that their work is nearing completion and the time can not be far off when they will be ready to turn over the great National Gettysburg Battlefield Park to such other authority as shall be designated by Congress for the preservation of the great work they have done. The most natural authority for this future care is the military to take charge of the large force that will always be needed here in the care and protection of the Park. It looks as if the future would bring here a military body, such as a regiment of cavalry with permanent barracks. And what more natural than a permanent camp and maneuver area. The government must maintain the military branch and the economical way would certainly be along the lines suggested to care for the Park which has cost millions. It makes little difference the sequence in which this future might be developed and it is suggested that the Merchants' Association take up the question of a permanent camp site and maneuver area and see what can be done along that line and what encouragement those in authority will give such a project.

AS TO BERRY.

Adams County Democrats for years have had reasons to question the political sincerity and squareness of Wm. H. Berry, who is the third party nominee for Governor, and it is no surprise to Adams County Democrats that he has proven a traitor to his party. In seeking the third party nomination he has proven himself to be politically dishonest, insincere and not square to his party ties and obligations. Before the Allentown convention he was reported to have threatened to bolt if he was not nominated, then denied such purpose and pledged his support to the nominee and again when defeated promised Senator Grim his support. He flies in the face of everything that is square and fair when he asks honors of his party and then goes to work to secure the third party nomination and in so doing proves himself a traitor to everything that is decent in politics. He is out for Berry and forgets the honorable and honest thing to his party. He has simply proven himself to be what Adams county Democrats have believed him to be, a traitor to Democracy and deserves the fate of traitors. In his position on Keystone ticket he is more of a Judas to his party than Munson, for he seeks to take Democratic votes from Grim to increase the chances of the election of Penrose's man Tener.

Fiftieth Anniversary

The Pennsylvania State Commission in charge of the Fiftieth Anniversary of the Battle of Gettysburg has arranged a conference of delegates for Thursday, October 13th. The Commission has invited the Governors of every State and the National Government to name delegates to participate in this conference. Assurances have been received from nearly every one invited that delegates will be sent to the conference. New York State has taken the initiative by naming Gen. Daniel E. Sickles to represent that State and it is expected that the other States will follow this course at once. At this conference suggestions as to the manner of celebration will be received. The delegates and the Pennsylvania Commissioners will meet in Governor Edwin S. Stuart's office, where the Governor will welcome them and will then go to Gettysburg. It is expected that a general plan will be agreed upon in the battlefield town, and then the matter so arranged that

Challenge from L. M. Buehler.

L. M. Buehler is seeking the worst case of dyspepsia or constipation in Gettysburg or vicinity to test Dr. Howard's new specific for the cure of those diseases.

So confident is he that this remarkable medicine will effect a lasting cure in a short time, that he offers to refund the money should it not be successful.

In order to secure the quickest possible introduction L. M. Buehler will sell a regular fifty cent package of this medicine at half price, 25 cents.

This specific of Dr. Howard's will cure sick headache, dizzy feelings, constipation, dyspepsia and all forms of malaria and liver trouble. It does not simply give relief for a time; it makes permanent and complete cures.

It will regulate the bowels, tone up the whole intestinal tract, give you an appetite, make food taste good and digest well and increase vigor.

Memorial Chapel to Priest.

A handsome Mortuary Chapel has just been completed in the Conewago Chapel Cemetery in memory of Rev. Eugene Haltermeyer, late rector of the church.

The chapel has been erected on the site, and will take the place of the large Mission Cross which stood in the centre of the burial ground for fifty-five years.

The mausoleum is built of the finest New England white granite, with a simple inscription on a tablet, giving the dates of the birth and death of the deceased priest. It is surmounted by a walnut cross, 20 feet in height, which was made in New York. The crucifix was imported from Munich and is considered a fine work of art.

On the mausoleum are two large urns to be used for decorative purposes. "The Calvary," as it is termed, presents a fine appearance, and can be seen from a great distance.

News of the Churches.

There will be no preaching service at Great Conewago Presbyterian church next Sabbath, or at York Springs, as the pastor is taking a vacation for that day.

—Mrs. C. S. Brewer who has been spending several weeks with her mother Mrs. Beard, left this week for her home in Bridgewater, Nova Scotia.

THE HARVEST OF DEATH

OLDEST CITIZEN OF ABBOTTSTOWN PASSES AWAY

Sad Death of Young Girl Following Operation to Save Her Life.

MRS. SAMUEL WOLF.—The angel of death early Sunday morning called the oldest resident of Abbottstown, Mrs. Samuel Wolf, who had been ill since early spring. She was a much respected and highly esteemed woman. She was a resident of Hamilton township until the death of her husband, which occurred about 23 years ago, after which time she lived alternately with her children. She leaves the following children to mourn her loss: Lewis and Aaron Wolf of Abbottstown, Mrs. Armstrong and Chas. Wolf of Hamilton, and Mrs. Jacob Hoover of Reading township. At the time of her death she resided with her daughter-in-law Mrs. Wm. Wolf. The deceased had passed her 86th milestone. Funeral services will be conducted on Wednesday morning, Aug. 3.

MRS. MARIE SNEERINGER, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Harry Sneeringer of Brush Run, Pleasant township, died last Friday, July 29, after a brief illness, from appendicitis, aged 11 yrs., 2 mos. and 21 days. The day previous to her death Dr. H. B. King of York, assisted by Dr. Treble, of the York hospital staff, Dr. J. L. Sheets of New Oxford, Dr. R. H. Lindaman of Bonneauville, and Dr. A. C. Rice of McSherrystown, performed an operation, and all that medical skill could suggest was done for the relief of the patient, but all in vain. She is survived by her parents, three brothers, Raymond, Edward and Paul, all at home. Services were held Tuesday, interment at St. Joseph's Catholic Church, Bonneauville, Rev. Father Ruehle, officiating.

BIZEKIAH GULDEN died at his home in Huntingdon township on Sunday, July 24. On the 14th of August he would have been 73 years of age. He was born in the lower end of Huntingdon township and lived nearly all his life in that district. During the Civil War he served as a member of Co. I, 165th Pa. Inf. The funeral services were held on Tuesday of last week with interment at Upper Bermudian church, Rev. Harvey Bickel conducting the services. He is survived by two sons, Orpheus and Curtis, of Huntingdon township and one daughter, Miss Minnie at home. Three brothers also survive, Edward of N. Dakota, George of Boyd, Neb., and Ephraim of Iowa, also two sisters, Mrs. Harriet Zimmerman of San Diego, Cal., and Mrs. Isabel Miller of Mt. Pleasant, Iowa.

MRS. LYDIA WINAND, widow of the late John Winand, died Monday night, July 25, at the home of her son Edward, near Abbottstown, aged nearly 86 years. She is survived by three sons, Edward and Theodorus of Berwick township, and Socrates Winand. The funeral services and interment took place at Mummert's Meeting House Thursday, July 28, Revs. C. F. and D. H. Baker officiating.

PAULINE WALTER, eldest child of Mr. and Mrs. Harry L. Walter, of Fairfield, died last Wednesday after a lingering illness, aged 11 years. Deceased was a bright and interesting child and her early demise is mourned by many. Funeral services were conducted by the Rev. Charles Dalzell last Friday, interment in Fairfield Union cemetery. Besides her parents she is survived by one sister Charlotte, and one brother Donald. Mrs. Walter has been very ill but is somewhat improved at this writing.

MISS HETTY SHANAFELTER died at her home in Huntingdon township on Tuesday of last week aged about 75 years. The funeral services were held on last Friday morning with interment at Gardner's church. She is survived by a brother, John Shanafelter, with whom she made her home for the past forty years, and one sister, Mrs. Kate Frey of Mt. Holly.

ALEXANDER EICHELBERGER died at his home at Ariosa, Tyrone township, on last Saturday morning after several weeks' illness from dropsy, aged 64 years, 8 months and 24 days. He had been keeping store at Ariosa for some years and enjoyed the respect and confidence of his community. The funeral was held on Tuesday morning, services by Rev. Marks with interment at church near Center Mills. He leaves a wife, two daughters and two sons, W. H. Hayberger of Aspers, Mrs. H. A. Bergenzer and W. E. Eichelberger of Tyrone township, and Clayton Eichelberger at home. Three brothers survive, John N. of near Harrisburg, Michael and Samson living in the West.

Trolley Movements to the South.

The Washington Frederick and Gettysburg steam railroad, the Hagerstown trolley railway and the Frederick trolley railway will be united as one system with a central power plant. The combination mileage will be about ninety miles and considerable extension is proposed at once from Thurmont to Emmittsburg and eventually from latter point to Gettysburg. The steam railroad will be rebuilt to electrify this branch and rails and ties have been bought and distributed along this line. It has not been determined where the central power plant will be located but it is said likely at a point between Frederick and Hagerstown for it is the purpose to sell light and power to the towns along the roads along with the operation of the trolley. With this system, on the South, the Chamberland Valley on the west fifteen miles away and the York system on the east less than ten miles away, really, the three ought to shake hands at Gettysburg as quick as they can get here, for the attractions of the great and beautiful Gettysburg Battlefield National Park will be just the thing to help to make these roads profitable.

Y. W. C. T. U. Officers Elected

The Preston Y. W. C. T. U. held a business meeting at the home of Cyrus S. Griest, Guernsey, the evening of July 16th.

The following officers were elected for the ensuing year: President, Miss Annie K. Sheely; First Vice Pres., Mrs. Aaron I. Weidner; Second Vice Pres., Mrs. George E. Boyer; Recording Secretary, Miss Osa Bittenger; Corresponding Secretary, Miss Stella Triestel; Treasurer, Miss Melissa Smelser.

The President made the following appointments: Supt's. of Loyal Legions, Arendtsville, Miss Mary Heiges; Assistant, Miss Stella Triestel and Miss Ella Klepper; Biglerville, Miss R. Alice Longsdorf; Fairmount, Miss Alice L. Black, Assistant, Mrs. Ira Baugher; Mount Tabor, Mrs. W. S. Adams; Bender's Church, Miss Eva Boyer, Assistant, Miss R. Alice Longsdorf; Superintendents of Press, Mrs. Luther Rice and Mrs. Cyrus S. Griest; Supt's of Literature, Mrs. C. L. Longsdorf; Supt. of Flower Mission, Mrs. Anna Walter; Supt. of Evangelistic work, Mrs. D. T. Koser; Supt. of Mothers Meetings, Mrs. William N. Hoyer.

In His Boyhood Days.

There's a little country village where I lived when but a boy, and the memory of those happy days still holds for me much joy. They didn't know of street cars—never saw automobiles, and our old-fashioned carriage was the finest thing on wheels. But things have changed since those days—this old world's moving fast, why, I just glanced out my window as a modern air ship passed. Today we have Chi-Namel that makes old floors like new, you really ought to know of it, it will appeal to you. Don't use carpets to cover the old dirt stained floor. The Chi-Namel ready-to-use graining process will give it a surface you will not want to cover. See samples of what we mean and try the self-grain. Sold by J. H. Colthower.

N. G. P. Camp.

Camp Major J. P. S. Gobin is the official name of the N. G. P. camp being prepared for the National Guard south of town. Work is being rushed at the camp so as to have it ready for the Guards when they begin to arrive next Wednesday, August 10th. General Gobin served in every N. G. P. camp for over twenty years and it is a fitting tribute that the camp this year be given his name.

Foot Nearly Cut Off.

William Bankert, the six year old son of Mr. and Mrs. Israel Bankert, while at play accidentally ran into a mowing scythe that had been left lay alongside a fence by one of the workmen. The sharp blade struck the child close to the ankle of the right leg, almost completely severing the foot from the limb, cutting through the bone, only a small bit of flesh and skin holding it fast. Dr. Spatz was summoned and adjusted the severed bones and sewed up and bandaged the flesh, and has hopes of saving the child from losing the foot, but it is most likely to leave him a cripple for life.

Two New Physicians.

Dr. Bender Z. Cashman, son of County Commissioner and Mrs. Z. H. Cashman, and Dr. John W. Sheetz, son of Dr. and Mrs. J. L. Sheetz, both of New Oxford, successfully passed the State medical examination and after a short vacation at their homes go to St. Francis Hospital, Pittsburg, Dr. Cashman being resident surgeon of hospital and Dr. Sheetz interne physician.

New Landlord at East Berlin.

J. L. Brown, recently landlord of the Shaffer House, has been succeeded by Clinton Garrett of Hanover street, this place. Mr. Garrett has already taken possession of the hotel and Mr. Brown has moved to Hanover.

Mr. Wellington's Entertainment.

Tuesday evening, Aug. 2, and Wednesday evening, Aug. 3, Mr. Wellington and his Associate Players will present in Walters' Theatre "A New York Roof Garden by Night." Much work has been done to present this feature of a stage on a stage and there will be an attractive vaudeville program of song and chorus with a new up-to-date feature of a pantomime by Mr. Wellington assisted by Miss Ruth Buehler, entitled "A Monk's Love" in which Nevin's famous song "The Rosary" is introduced. An entertainment is promised for the benefit of the band which will attract and please the audience.

Mrs. Daniel Cromer of near New Oxford had her left eye removed several days ago at the York city hospital. Mrs. Cromer injured her eye a month ago.

GRAND CLEARANCE SALE

Had we the space here we could give special Mid Summer News of lowered Prices on almost every line of seasonable goods in our stock.

One principle of our business has always been to close out each season's purchase in its season---and we attribute much of our past success to it.

In making our contracts for Spring of 1910---mostly months before the season opened---we were persuaded, by threatened price advances in some lines, to make them larger than usual, so that we have more stock to sacrifice in several departments than we ever have had before.

This Clearance Sale has been advertised for several weeks with a general response, but almost every day adds something to the Price Clean Up in every department.

Come to see us with the expectation of greater money saving than ever before.

Are Doctors Any Good?

Foolish question! Yet some people act as if a medicine could take the place of a doctor! The best medicine in the world cannot do this. Have a family doctor, consult him frequently, trust him fully. If we did not believe doctors endorsed Ayer's Cherry Pectoral for coughs and colds, we would not offer it to you. Ask your doctor. No alcohol in this cough medicine. J. C. Ayer Co., Lowell, Mass.

ALL OVER THE COUNTY MANY A DAY IS SPOILED

SOME OF THE FREAKS LIGHTNING HAS BEEN PLAYING.

Hand Mashed—Hurt at a Barn Raising—Tine of Fork through Hand.

Lightning struck a post in S. Shoemaker's field near Hanover and followed a wire a distance when it struck one of his cows, killing it instantly and stunning another which recovered.

Lightning killed a cow for Richard Cline of Huntington township and the barn of Emory Hitterbrand of near Littlestown was recently struck and his best horse killed.

The cross arms on three telephone poles at edge of Arendtsville, were knocked off by lightning. A chestnut tree was hit at Milton Hartmann's, a shock of rye burned on farm of Edward Keller and shock of wheat on Henry Deardorff's farm and Clinton Deardorff's farm.

George Heagy while working at riveting in water wheel works at Hanover had his right hand mashed by a twelve pound sledge in hands of a fellow workman crushing the hand in a frightful manner.

At the recent raising of new barn on the farm of John Nace near East Berlin pike, pole fell striking Chas. Crawford on the forehead inflicting a severe cut. After washing and bandaging wound Mr. Crawford helped to finish the job.

Charles Auchey of near Abbotstown was pitching sheaves in hauling in wheat and a tine of a fork penetrated the palm of his left hand going near through, and causing a painful wound.

The four horse team of Joseph H. Spangler of Mt. Joy township took fright while hay was being hauled in and started on a run-a-way across the field with a 12-year old son, Luther, on top of the half load of hay. The father shouted to his son to jump off, which he did without accident to himself. The horses ran against a wire fence and broke it down; they continued on into a woods close by where they were completely fastened up among the trees. Strange to say the horses escaped serious injury and the wagon was but little damaged.

James A. Speelman, keeper of Sunnyside cemetery, York Springs has been granted a pension of $24 per month instead of $17 as heretofore.

The new church bell on the upper church in Idaville was rung for the first time on a recent Sunday evening.

G. O. MICKLEY, of Virginia Mills, was bitten in hand by copperhead snake while working in his cornfield.

EMORY A. JACOBY and wife have made deed of assignment to C. S. Duncan, Esq.

GOLDEN KEY TO CHILD'S MIND

It is Sometimes Hard to Find, but in This Particular Case It Was Music.

A Chicago school and home visitor tells this story: "Mary was the terror of her teachers and her companions. It was fight, fight from morning until night. She threw erasers and books at her teachers and at the other children, she broke every rule and was a problem. When I visited her home I found Mary was the little drudge, doing all the work and caring for the sick mother. We found work for the boys out of work, sent the little ones to kindergarten and moved the family into a new locality. Mary's new teachers were willing to help make a new girl of her. One morning when I visited her school Mary came to me and whispered: 'Miss B, I want to tell you something all by yourself where no one can hear us. It is something you must not tell anyone.' I took Mary off by herself and she looked at me with an expression I shall not soon forget and said: 'Miss B, I love music.' Here was the golden key which would unlock Mary's stubborn little heart. I took her to a music teacher, who promised to train her voice as soon as Mary is old enough, and in the meantime a happy little girl trudges to a piano teacher once a week and has been told how to care for her body and her voice so that she may some day become a really fine singer."

Byron's Bride of Abydos.

It is just 100 years ago that Lord Byron arrived in Greece, where he wrote that beautiful poem, "The Bride of Abydos," and that exquisite song, the "Maid of Athens," which, says a Paris contemporary, every Englishman of culture knows by heart.

Documents enable us to establish the true identity of the heroine of this last poem. She was one of the three daughters of Mr. Black, English vice-consul at Athens, at whose house Byron for some time lived. After the departure of the poet, Theresa Black married an archaeologist, M. Pittakis, whose widow she became several years later. Her beauty, her charm, her elegance, conquered every heart, including Byron's. In 1873 the heroine of the poem was an old woman of upright figure and still showing signs of her former beauty. With age had come poverty. The Times, moved by her distress, opened at this epoch a subscription in her favor. She died in 1875.

By a cough which can not be broken by ordinary remedies. But why not try a medicine that will cure any cough that any medicine can cure? That is Kemp's Balsam. It is recommended by doctors and nurses, and it costs only 25 cents at any druggist or dealer's. Keep a bottle always in the house, and you will always be prepared to treat a cold or cough before it causes any suffering at all.

And this is the annual gamble that human beings are making with Nature
all throughout these Western provinces of Canada. During the ten-day period of ripening season, every year,
there is the danger that a killing frost will catch the grain. The margin of time between the ripening and the killing frosts is so small that everywhere in these grain-growing provinces there is that anxious ten-day period
—the anxiety based on the fear that the margin of safety will disappear
and the frost catch the grain before it is ripe and ready.

This, fundamentally, is the heart of the Western Canada proposition, and the people living there realize it.
Traveling through these provinces,
talking with the elevator men, the merchants, the farmers, the bankers,
the homesteaders, one can not but catch this note of uneasiness. It is in the air. Consciously or subconsciously it is in everyone's mind. True, in the few years that grain has been grown in this county, the farmer has always won the chance, but by so close a margin that there always remains behind the fear—the great fear of the Northwest prairies county.

From Smyth to State House.

About the most interesting figure in Colorado politics to-day is Roady Kenehan, erstwhile blacksmith and today State Auditor, and Alice Robe has a vastly interesting story of this unique character in HUMAN LIFE for August.

No man ever entered a State office
with a greater handicap than did Roady Kenehan, and certain other officials looked with scorn upon the uneducated blacksmith. But he immediately proceeded to show the people of the State a few things that keen wit and intelligence could accomplish without education. From the moment he took office he began, figuratively speaking, to wield his shillelagh with telling effect, observing the rule of Donnybrook Fair—"Whenever you see a head, hit it,"—only the heads that Roady was after adorned the shoulders of grafters great and small, and he swatted them with a hearty good will.

His searching investigations revealed an astonishing state of affairs. The Steel Trust and Standard Oil were among the biggest rodents to run to cover. The affairs of State institutions were aered with resultant graft scandals that appalled the public, and officials who had been jockeying for years at the public expense suddenly found their jockeying out short. "I'll show the people of the State that I'm on the job," he declared, unmindful of the anvil chorus of protests from politicians.

But if the Machine find Roady a bull in a china shop, the people are quick to recognize beneath his rough exterior that noblest work of God, an honest man, and the doughty blacksmith's name is mentioned for higher honors yet.

Open Windows in Zero Weather.

In an article in the August Mc-CLURE's on "Oxygenizing a City," Burton J. Hendrick tells of the new
"fresh-air" schools in Chicago:
"Principal Watt has gone even further. In the lower grades of his school
he began the experiment, last winter, of abolishing heat altogether. In these rooms he has adopted a new educational motto: 'Less instruction and more oxygen.' In keeping with this these little children no longer sit together at desks with folded hands.
The desks have been removed, kinder-garden chairs have been brought in,
and the pupils given the utmost freedom of movement. In cold winter weather they wear their wraps and hats—and these are their only source of heat. In zero weather, they sit at their tables in front of open, 'drafty' windows. Their fingers do not get so numb that they cannot write on the blackboards, and physical discomfort
is unknown.

"One day last winter when the thermometer registered ten below zero, a woman school visitor came into one of these cold rooms. She was horrified at what she described as 'cruelty.'
But the children simply grinned. They enjoy the change immensely, and have nicknamed the old hot-air place the 'hospital rooms,' because there are so many sick children in them."

Earthquake-Catching as a Sport.

Earthquakes are recorded by means of the horizontal-pendulum seismo-graph. The best example of horizontal pendulum in everyday use is a common hinged door. The earthquake instrument is a heavy weight pivoted delicately on a frame, which is swung at an upright hinge-line, so that the faintest movement in the post will be communicated to the frame. A light lever with a pen, at the outer end of the weighted frame, makes on a paper
moved by clockwork a magnified record of the movements of the earth's crust. The pen is a bristle, and the paper is glossy and smoked, so that the record is a scratch. The weight tends to stand still as the earth waves move the post, and the pen writes an autograph of the movement, which takes place about the weight as a center. Every second an electric ticker connected with a clock scratches a mark on the side of the moving paper,
so that the exact time of any earthquake autograph may be calculated.

Let us stop a moment to watch what happens when an earthquake wave passes through the earth. The weight is still, its pen is slightly in contact with the paper, and as the latter moves by clockwork there is left written a straight line. Slowly, as we watch, the writing finger moves side-

wise, and begins to make little wave-marks. This lasts several minutes.
Then the pen begins to creep out until it is very slowly scratching long, sweeping zigzags. In the course of half an hour this slowly diminishes.
Not a single tremor has been felt. The waves passing through the ground
were too broad and slow for sensation,
but they have come thousands of miles from a place where walls were falling and people were rushing frantically
into the streets.

When we consider that every strong earthquake may be recorded all over the globe, and that one occurs somewhere every week or two, the sport of earthquake-catching becomes fairly exciting. If the interest attaching to seismology were better known there would be many amateurs. An Omori seismograph may be bought for about one hundred dollars, and any cellar, on any sort of ground, will catch the passing earthquakes.—From Prof.
Jaggar, Jr.'s "Studying Earthquakes"
in AUGUST CENTURY.

How the Nandi Spearman Kill Lions

At last the tense ring was complete,
and the spearman rose and closed in.
The lion looked quickly from side to side, saw where the line was thinnest,
and charged at his topmost speed.
The crowded moment began. With shields held steady, and quivering spears poised, the men in front braced themselves for the rush and the shock;
and from either hand the warriors sprang forward to take their foe in flank. Bounding ahead of his fellows,
the leader reached throwing distance,
the long spear flickered and plunged;
as the lion felt the wound he half turned, and then flung himself on the man in front. The warrior threw his spear: it drove deep into the life, for entering at one shoulder it came out of the opposite flank, near the thigh.
A yard of steel through the great body.
Rearing, the lion struck the man,
bearing down the shield, his back arched; and for a moment he slaked his fury with fang and talon. But on the instant I saw another spear driven clear through his body from side to side; and as the lion turned again the bright spear blades darting toward him were flashes of white flame. The end had come. He seized another man, who stabbed him and wrenched loose. As he fell he gripped a spear head in his jaws with such tremendous force that he bent it double. Then the warriors were round and over him,
stabbing and shouting, wild with furious exultation.

From the moment when he charged until his death I doubt whether ten seconds had elapsed, perhaps less; but what a ten seconds! The first half dozen spears had done the work.
Three of the spear blades had gone clear through the body, the points projecting several inches; and these, and one or two others, including the one he had seized in his jaws, had been twisted out of shape in the terrible death struggle.

We at once attended to the two wounded men.
Then the warriors, raising their shields above their heads, and chanting the dejected victory song, marched with a slow, dancing step around the dead body of the lion; and this savage dance of triumph ended a scene of as fierce interest and excitement as I ever hope to see.—From
"African Game Trails," by Theodore Roosevelt, in the AUGUST SCRIBNER.

Unexplored Arabia.

That the recent polar achievements
have not laid bare all the earth's secrets is discussed by Dillon Wallace in the AUGUST OUTING. Of Arabian Peninsula, he says:

"Almost the entire southern half is occupied, according to native report,
by a vast wilderness called generally Ruba el-Khali, or 'Dwelling of the Void'; but while on its western edge are the dunes of el-Akhaf and on its eastern edge is a rolling, gravelly
steppe which the Arabs call el-Dahna,
no European has ever entered this immense tract, which embraces some six hundred thousand square miles.

"Six hundred thousand square miles of totally unknown land in Arabia alone! And in the part of the world where the human race is supposed to have had its birth and history dawned
! Who can guess what buried cities lie here and what romantic stories of the past archeological and ethnographical research may lay bare."

Modern Grain Handling

F. W. Fitzpatrick writing of "Conserving Our Grain Supply" in the August "The World To-Day" Contrasts the methods of the not far distant past with that of to-day, says:
Just sixty years ago there was sent from Chicago the first shipload of grain that ever went out of the West to the East. The ship was the brig Osceola. She carried 2000 bushels of wheat and was loaded from the improvised elevator at the Newberg and Dole dock by means of underspouts, boxes and bags, all manipulated by hand and it took a day to do it. Now we load a five or six thousand ton ship with over 400,000 bushels of grain
from a one or two million bushel elevator in thirty minutes, and the grain is originally taken from cars, weighed cleaned, stored spouted into other cars or into ships by machinery, as simple and beautifully effective as is that most wondrously perfect mechanism of the flour mill, that seems endowed with even greater than human skill and dexterity.

Be Light Hearted and Gay.

"Our besetting sin is to be too serious and set too high a value upon sobriety," says Margaret E. Sangster in the WOMAN'S HOME COMPANION for August. "I hold a brief for pure fun.
Laughter is wholesome; mirth does more good than medicine. Not merely when we are on a holiday, but in mid-current of the daily round we are the better for an interlude of amusement. The person who was born without a sense of humor is greatly to be pitied. No situation is intolerable if one can see the fun in it. When I hear or see condemnation of a girl's gaiety, I am forced to the conclusion that the grave censor never had a girlhood worth the name or else was born under a baleful star. Immoderate giggling belongs to a transient phase and should not be reproved when children are in their early teens; rather it should be rejoiced in, and their elders look back in tender wistfulness on their own days of such thoughtless delight. Be as frivolous as you please,

dear maiden and matron, in the summer days and be assured that in its place frivolity is the sunshine that dances on the wave. Some of the most portentous people one meets, people solemn and severe, and given to frowning, are fools underneath their masks. Some of the lightest-hearted gayest and most winsome in their capacity for seeing fun and making it are among the great and wise. It one has no native sense of humor, one should endeavor by every legitimate means to acquire it. An evening spent at a play which from the first act to the last scintillates with jests and irresistibly provokes mirth is a boon to tired folks; so, too, is an hour
with a novel in which the serious underlying purpose is illumined by flashes of fun on a summer day or a winter afternoon."

Fiction as a Diet.

In the AUGUST GOOD HOUSEKEEPING
Dr. Woods Hutchinson writing of "Fiction as a Diet" says: It, oftener men read until they forget their trouble, there would not be half so much drinking for the same purpose.
I regard it as one of the most useful rules of mental health to keep on hand constantly at least one good novel, no matter who it is by or what it is about so long as it tells a good story and paints things as they really are. And at least once a day, preferably just before going to bed at night, plunge into it long enough to forget yourself and be unwilling to stop. It will make your sleep sounder, your brain clearer
and your temper sweeter and sane than almost any other form of mental exercise possible. If you are tired, a good novel will rest you; if you are worried it will make you forget your worries and yourself; if you are sick it is one of your best medicines. The man or woman, who, in the sunset
after glow of life can enjoy a good story has found the secret of perpetual youth."

Women in Orchestra.

The August "Musician" in addition to the twenty-four pages of instrumental and vocal music is replete with interesting articles. The story is told of "Women as Orchestral Players" and how Mrs. Caroline B. Nichols formed an orchestra with about six musicians and "we played anywhere we could get an engagement, gradually increasing in number. Now we have forty young ladies under contract. We have been twice across the continent," and Mrs. Nichols is of the opinion "there are many opportunities for professional work for any who are competent." Warren H. Miller tells of "The Musical Life of the Quartier Latin," and Jules Combarieu continues his "History of the National Hymns." To the lover of music the "Musician" is a monthly delight.

Made From Grapes.

Of all the fruits that grow to give sustenance and nourishment to mankind, the grape is the most famous.
A favorite subject of the poet, this healthful, luscious fruit has from the beginning of time been celebrated in song and story. Therefore it is a pleasure to know that to the grape we are indebted for some of the finest foods that go to our table, for from the grape is derived Royal Grape Cream of Tartar, the chief ingredient and active principle of the world-renowned Royal Baking Powder.

While the connection between baking powder and grapes may seem remote, it is evident to those who know that cream of tartar exists in all ripe grapes, from which it is directly produced in the following manner:

Flowing with the juice of the grape
from the press, the cream of tartar gradually separates therefrom and settles upon and adheres to the sides of the casks. It is subsequently collected, boiled and purified with water.
Crystals of cream of tartar, white and very pure, are produced specially refined, and ground into an impalpable powder. This forms the Royal Grape Cream of Tartar from which Royal Baking Powder is made. The exclusive employment of this pure fruit acid has aided in rendering Royal unique in the baking powder world,
adding, as it does, the delicious flavor
and wholesome properties which are characteristic of all food made with it.

Tall Oats.

We notice a great deal of boasting
of tall oats, but can this be beaten?
Squire Hammers passed through a field of oats on his mother's farm July 4, pulled up a stock of oats every 25 steps at the side of the field he had 8
stalks in his hand, each stalk measuring 63 inches and averaged 100 grains of oats. We say to the moneyed men of Adams if a farm will produce such stalks without lime and manure, it would if improved produce oats eight feet high. And the widow has offered this farm for the last three years at $35 per acre, soil better than hundreds of gardens. Come and see the place. Will sell at once.

EAST BERLIN.

A serious accident happened last Friday in Carroll township, York Co., near Stevensburg, on the farm of Westley Croil on road leading from old Croil Tavern stand to Siddens-town. James Wentz was so terribly injured in the accident that he died within fifteen minutes. He was employed by Curtis Bentz, who owned the threshing machine. They had just finished and some fine stuff was thrown on the table but machine had not stopped. Wentz went on the machine to clean it and stepping on the table his left foot slipped and he fell in such a manner that he slipped into the machine and his left leg was completely torn off at the hip. Dr. Herick of Wellsburg was summoned but the man was dead before the doctor arrived. James Wentz was single and aged about 35 years. He was known in this place and his horrible death was a shock to this community.

PUBLIC SALE.

ON SATURDAY, AUGUST 13, 1910. The undersigned, administrator of Charles W. Patterson, late of Mount Pleasant Twp., Adams County, Pa., deceased, by an order of Court will offer at public sale on the premises, on the above date, the real estate of the deceased, viz:

A farm situated in Mount Pleasant township, Adams County, Pa., about two miles west of Bonneauville, and three miles east of Gettysburg, along what is known as the Low Dutch Road leading from Butternut Station to the Baltimore turnpike, adjoining land is of John Rudisill, A. L. Kuchart, John H. Miller, Conrad Deener and others, containing one hundred and three acres of land. The improvements consist of a two-story stone dwelling house with one story kitchen attached, summer house, etc., large bank barn with wagon shed attached, carriage house, hog pen, etc., never failing wells at house and barn. The buildings are in good order and repair, having been recently repainted. There are due proportions of meadow and woodland. The farm is in a good locality and highly productive, convenient to markets, schools, churches, etc., and should command the attention of buyers. There is also a fine large orchard and other fruit, and is well watered. Persons wishing to view the property will be shown the same by the administrators residing thereon.

Sale to commence at 1 o'clock p. m., on said day when attendance and terms will be made known by
